

their names were disclosed. I believe that in putting credence in their statements I have been led to doing an injustice to both the sanatorium and to Dr. Ennion G. Williams.

"I am now satisfied that I have probably done the parties whom I may have criticized an unintentional wrong. Acting under this belief and impression, Mr. President, I avail myself of this opportunity to ask to be allowed to withdraw my criticism of the managers of the Catawba Sanatorium and to ask that this paper be spread on the Journal of the Senate."

Senate Sessions Brief.

Two constructive sessions were held by the Senate yesterday. A struggling session of the House was present when President Eliason convened the body. Those who answered to the roll were Senators Early, Watkins, Owens, Holmes, Parks, Halsey, Wickham, Folkes, Echols, Noel, Saunders and Keesele.

At the session which started at noon, a motion of Senator Echols, 1,000 copies of the Byrd liquor bill and of the general appropriation bill were ordered to be printed for the use of the State officials and judiciary.

A number of bills were read by title and signed by the president.

At 4 p. m. there was another session, when a few more bills received the signature of the president.

Senator Harman was appointed on the Committee on Enrolled Bills.

Another session will take place at 12 to-day.

What the House Did.

In striking contrast to the stirring scenes of a few days ago were the sessions of the House of Delegates yesterday. At noon nineteen weary Senators gathered in the chamber and went through the form of a session.

Whoever it was in the Constitutional Convention who caused the provision that bills should be signed by the presiding officers in open session is not receiving altogether complimentary references to his foresight. It is pointed out that so far as security goes nothing is gained. The Lieutenant-Governor and the Speaker could examine the bills more carefully working in privacy and at their leisure.

But the provision is there and it must be done. Perhaps fifty bills which have so far been enrolled were signed, and the Constitution was complied with in that respect.

When the Speaker called the House to order, Governor McWhorter, without anything daunted by the change of scene, shouted his usual instruction to the members to be seated, and to the others to retire to the gallery. He also told those upstairs to maintain order, although there was no body there.

Prayer was offered by Rev. George Greene, of Clifton Forge. He returned thanks for the splendid record made by the General Assembly.

Wanted the Journal Read.

The clerk announced the Journal of the preceding day's session. Speaker Byrd put the usual motion to dispense with the reading of the Journal. Mr. Cox moved to reconsider the motion.

Mr. Baker, for the first time, explained. The member from Chesterfield said that during his many years of service he had never had the pleasure of hearing the Journal read, and he would like to do so on this occasion.

The Speaker told Captain Baker that in all probability he would never hear the Journal read. Mr. Cooke moved to pass the motion to reconsider by a vote of 10 to 1.

Clerk Williams read the report of the Senate's work on Saturday.

An extra fee of $20 was voted to the Speaker for the extra day's session in the room of the State Corporation Commission, in which many committee meetings have been held.

Enrolled bills were brought to the Speaker's desk and signed.

Mr. Stebbins moved that Sergeant-at-Arms Watkins, of the Senate, who was on the floor, be called back to his own side of the Capitol.

Calls Up Prohibition Bill.

Mr. Cox called up the Myers State-wide prohibition bill, and called on Mr. Love to explain it. Mr. Love thanked him, but apparently did not say any more in complying. Speaker Byrd said that the motion would be entertained, and that he would read the name of the member from Richmond in the affirmative on the bill.

At 12:15 adjournment was taken to 4 o'clock, on motion of Mr. Spartz.

Upon reassembling, a wait of an hour was made necessary because of a delay with the printing of the enrolled bills. The time was spent in telling jokes and in reminiscences of the session which has ended. The members were leaving the city one by one, and only fourteen attended.

Mr. Cox moved that the Senate bill raising the income tax amendment to the Constitution be taken up, and that Judge Yarrall be invited to address the House. This member was not prepared to do so. He was instead appointed by the Speaker to assist the committee in preparing the bills.

On motion of Mr. Cox, $20 each was voted to the Capitol policeman as compensation for extra duty.

General Good Humor.

Mr. Good moved that all the money left in the contingent fund should be divided among the members then present. Mr. Stebbins suggested that this resolution, which was adopted, should be communicated to the Senate, but this was opposed by the Speaker on the ground that the Senator from Rockingham would then take it all for his Harrisonburg school.

Mr. Ewing was requested to communicate the parting message of Mr. Love to the House, the member from Lunenburg having been absent since the session. Mr. Ewing repeated in an eloquent address made by Mr. Love at the last session explaining why he could not vote for a bill. He also conveyed the remarks of the strenuous fighter of the State Board of Education to the House.

At last the enrolled bills announced, and were signed, and at 5:20 the House, on motion of Mr. Oliver, adjourned to noon to-day. It is hoped to be ready for final adjournment to-morrow.

Marshall B. Booker, clerk of the Senate, was presented with a fine leather hat case, two "stunning" dress vests and some other dress clothes essentials by the committee clerks of the Senate yesterday as a token of their regard for him. Assistant Clerk Hanger presented the gift, while Clinton A. Boyce, in a short, but feeling speech, lauded Mr. Booker and predicted a great political future for him. In reply, Clerk Booker voiced his appreciation of the gifts, and had pleasant things to say about his assistants.

The Senate has no "Senate of Pages," but James Pettis, Jr., of Norfolk, who is smart and quick, always writes the "under the table" notes to Senator James Pettis. The pages in the Senate feel the dignity of that body, and would not violate its traditions by organizing a "fourth house."

New nicknames have been awarded to Senators Hart, of Roanoke, and Harman, of Richmond. They are known as "the undertakers" for the scientific way in which they put the "kibosh" to the famous "rolling stock bill," which would have taken away a small fortune of revenue from their respective cities. Yet they still have the doleful look, however much their hearts are two-stepping with joy.

Nobody knows just when "Uncle" Frank B. Watkins, Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate, began the duties of that office. Some say it was during the administration of Andrew Jackson; others right after that. However, he has courteously performed his duties to the thorough satisfaction of the Senators, and also of the pages, who are under his direction. The latter gave him a box of real Havana cigars, and enough chewing tobacco to last until the next session. In appreciation of his kindness to us.

Up in the red-hot prohibition districts there are going to be many surprises when the Senators there get their boxes of documents. The official that nobody reads, the copies of petitions for State-wide prohibition, the "do-nothing" pamphlets of the booze barons, will be sent to the Senators in the boxes, labeled, "Fine Old North Carolina Corn." "Old Virginia Highball" and "It's Time for a Nigger Highball." This sort of encasing will not be intentional, but explanations will have to be forthcoming from the distinguished representatives.

An excellent change is to be made in the halls of the General Assembly. Work is under way on remodeling and refitting the halls. The new plan calls for the two false windows in each hall, that on either side of the rostrum there will be a big window. This will mean a lot more light, and is in accord with the ideas of the architects.

State Appropriation Bill Cuts Out $5,000 for Exploiting Resources.

HEALTH FUND IS LARGEST

Legislature Allows $40,000 for Building at Catawba Sanatorium.

Until a very late hour last night a swarm of men worked as busily as bees in the enrolling room of the clerk of the House of Delegates. The appropriation bill, after an all-day session, reconciling the Senate and House bills with the report of the Committee of Conference, reached this room at 8 o'clock. This measure is not yet ready for the public. Each particular interest knows well enough how it fared, but to one trying to gather up all the ends from these sources, without access to the bill, a comprehensive statement is exceedingly difficult.

Among the smaller items which went unnoticed at first is the cutting out of the amount of $5,000 which has heretofore been appropriated annually for advertising this State, under the direction of the Department of Agriculture. During the debate on the bill in the House, the point was made that what was said to be a surplus in the funds of this department could be used for this purpose. The publication of the handbook of the department has been done with this fund.

Large Health Appropriation.

The State Board of Health has $40,000 for the first year. It is further given $40,000 for buildings and improvements at the Catawba Sanatorium, which has been so much in the public eye during the past few days. This is expected to be a most valuable ally in the warfare against the white plague in Virginia. The board gets $20,000 for the second year, and $27,000 for Catawba, for support. A bill of far-reaching importance, which has needed but a little attention, was passed during the last hours of the session, having already received action in the Senate. It refers to bailing persons convicted of crime. The discretion is left to the court, so as to allow release on bond to persons who have been convicted, and who have taken an appeal, and to whom judgment has been suspended. Most of the Virginia courts, it is stated, have held that they had no right to release on bail any person given a sentence involving imprisonment. Lawyers hold that frequently bail is not only allowable, but desirable.

A striking instance of such a case was presented about a year ago at Nashville, in Tennessee, a law somewhat similar to the new one in Virginia is in force. The Coopers, who had been charged with the murder of former Senator Carmack, were in jail for months, head without bail, when merely charged with the crime. As soon as they were convicted they were released on bond, their case now being before the Supreme Court on appeal.

Dividing Pensions.

Just before the appropriation bill was voted on in the House Saturday night a bill was passed which will in future obviate the possibility of pensioners who are properly on the rolls being deprived of any help. Provision is made, in case of a shortage, for prorating the money received for pensions from the regular fund for this purpose. Heretofore the claims have been paid in full until the money was exhausted, with the result that quite a number received nothing during the past two years.

The Senate sterilization bill died on the House calendar. This measure was in somewhat different form from the one which was defeated on vote in the House. Safeguards were thrown around the bill, but the House decided that prohibition does not prohibit pamphlets of the booze barons, will be sent to the Senators in the boxes, labeled, "Fine Old North Carolina Corn." "Old Virginia Highball" and "It's Time for a Nigger Highball." This sort of encasing will not be intentional, but explanations will have to be forthcoming from the distinguished representatives.

PEARY WILL NOT SEEK SOUTH POLE

Sitting for Portrait, He Declines to Talk of Data Congress Wants.

New York, March 14.—Commander Robert E. Peary declined while here to discuss the decision of the subcommittee on Naval Affairs, that he must go to Washington and submit his data of the journey to the North Pole before the committee could pass on the question of giving him the rank and pay of a rear admiral. He would not say if he intended to go to Washington.

The commander also declined to answer the published statement of Matt Henson, his body servant on the North Polar journey, that Peary had neglected to write to him and also had not paid for certain photographs he obtained from Henson.

Peary was seen at the National Art Club in Gramercy Park, where he gave a first sitting to Louis Mark, the Hungarian court painter, who has crossed the ocean especially to paint Peary's portrait. The explorer posed for more than two hours. When asked concerning the proposed Antarctic expedition, the commander said:

"I have no doubt that the joint expedition of the Peary Arctic Club and of the National Geographic Society will start South next fall. Of course, the Roosevelt will be used. As for me, I have declined to take up this work."

HUNTING FOR CLUE TO MEAT BOYCOTT

Prices Stay High and Crusade Sleeps in Many Cities.

New York, March 14.—An investigation to-day to learn what has become of "the great meat boycott of 1910" launched two months ago to bring the beef barons to their knees and the price of their products down seemed to have been abandoned. The route of most noble crusades, and that the objective of the attack, the beef trust, is still doing business at the old stand.

The big petitions beginning so grandly, "I hereby pledge myself to abstain from all meats, etc.," have disappeared, and the handsome women who, after haranguing the crowds in all of the public places of the city and obtaining thousands of eloquent signatures, have given up the fight on the octopus.

Prices Higher Than Before.

The price of all meat products to-day higher than before, and the Beef Trust is busily engaged in making the crusade. For a few days, prices were lowered in some cities, but when the supply in the local markets had been reduced, prices began to soar. Eggs and butter, however, are away down and with the advent of good weather, which will cause the hens to lay and give open pasture to cattle, it is claimed there will be no further panic prices charged for dairy products.

Incident in History.

Cleveland, O., March 14.—The Cleveland meat boycott, which was the original cause of the anti-meat protest against the high cost of living, is now merely an incident of municipal history and the price of hogs to-day is almost a dollar above the figure current at the outset of the anti-meat strike.

During the meat eating strike beef fluctuated with the latitude of 1 cent margin. Several small meat markets suspended business temporarily and practically 100,000 working men abstained from the consumption of meat for a short period. A boycott of the Cleveland live stock market by shippers resulted and the price of hogs at the outset of the movement, $10.00 against $9.75 a hundred weight at the outset of the movement. All other products have risen proportionately.

Storage Eggs Held Up.

Boston, March 14.—Four tons of cold storage eggs temporarily withheld from sale and the possibility of appointment by Governor Draper has caused an inquiry into the high cost of living are the only results of the meat boycott which was launched here with songs and speeches and the signing of thousands of pledges a few weeks ago.

Gratulations, resolutions and indorsements dealing with the crusade against the high price of meat throughout Massachusetts have sunk to a whisper. Similar reports come from all sections of New England, and thousands of pledges which were signed, promising total abstinence from meat for thirty days or more, have evidently been entirely forgotten. Meat prices are at the sale level as before the inception of the boycott and meat dealers report the usual amount of business.

Not an Entire Failure.

St. Louis, Mo., March 14.—Although the agitation against the high price of meats that resulted in general boycotts is not attracting the wide attention it held for a time in St. Louis, the movement to-day shows the boycott has not been a failure.

Butchers say they believe those who joined the anti-meat movement are standing by their resolutions, for sales are still below normal.

Peary was seen at the National Art Club in Gramercy Park, where he gave a first sitting to Louis Mark, the Hungarian court painter, who has crossed the ocean especially to paint Peary's portrait. The explorer posed for more than two hours. When asked concerning the proposed Antarctic expedition, the commander said:

MOTORING CAUSES WOMEN'S BALDNESS

Must Choose Between Fewer Rides or Less Hair, Says Dermatologist.

Boston, March 14.—It is apparent from what Dr. C. J. Whitte, dermatologist at the Massachusetts General Hospital, says that women must either cut down the number of auto trips or run the awful chance of becoming bald. The noted authority says baldness is bad for the hair.

"Usually women neglect to cover their heads properly, with the result that they are compelled to take many shampoos," the witte said to-day. Washing the hair and scalp once a month is often enough for a skin which is normal. A shampoo every other day or so, or even once a week, will produce baldness, and after a period of time, it is impossible to cure abnormal falling out of hair."

The problem is that, if women want to go motoring, they must completely cover the hair, but keep out the air and produce baldness.

VICTIMS SOUGHT SOME EASY MONEY

Council Bluffs, Ia., March 14.—Emmet W. Weisiger, general counsel for J. C. Mabray and his associates, on trial in the United States Court for alleged wholesale swindling by fraudulent use of the mails to promote fixed sporting events, to-day cross-examined government witnesses and brought out admissions that the witnesses went to the headquarters of the Millionaires' Club with the avowed purpose of making some "easy money." Incidentally, the government to-day uncovered another "story" of the defendants at Wilkesbarre, Pa., where at least one victim, it is alleged, lost $13,000. Losses from other places total victims totaling $2,000. The prosecution to-day placed in evidence many letters of Mabray in connection with the testimony of witnesses.

A. B. Brande, a lumber merchant of Grinnell, Ia., identified several letters which solicited his presence at a sporting event in Wilkesbarre, Pa. He declined, however, to be victimized, although he admitted they had asked him to furnish $10,000 for the proposed match. C. O. Newberry, of Argyle, Ia., testified to losing $13,000 on two horse races at Wilkesbarre. He told a story similar to those related by other victims, but closed with the statement that he "thought they were a good time and showed me such a good time that I decided to pay my own expenses of $75, and did not ask them to reimburse me. They all went to the church, and said they liked me."

William Burke, of St. Louis, a plumbing contractor, related the loss of $5,000 on a prize fight in New Orleans. Harry Forbes was his fiancé. Forbes was in the courtroom. Burke identified Mabray as one of the "Millionaires." Burke said: "I looked crooked to me, but I bet my $5,000. Forbes was hurt in the second round. The 'millionaire' secretary, who I never saw the secretary or my money again. I packed my grip and returned to St. Louis."

JEFF'S PROGRAM MOST EXTENSIVE

With bucksaws in his digits and corkscrews in his jumpers, the Jocular Jeff is getting ready to launch the "Jeff's Program" for the coming year. After sparring three rounds with a Durham bull and pumping the lactated fluid out of a flock of forty cows, Jeff settles down to his daily routine, which is as follows:

6 A. M.—Arises and takes ice cold shower. Jumps out of second-story window and works up an appetite by running fifty miles on top of a rail fence. Comes home and puts on clothes.

6:10 A. M.—Sits down to light breakfast, which consists of three dozen hard-boiled eggs, four steaks, three gallons of coffee, several loaves of bread and thirty-six baked apples. Rests for one minute.

7 A. M.—Chops 2,000 cords of wood, plows 1,000 acres, milks all the cows in the neighborhood and then stands in the neighborhood of 10,000 feet above the level of the sea. To make the climb worth while as a means of taking off weight, he packs a ton of coal in each hand.

9:15 A. M.—Boxes eighty rounds with a many different trainers, wrestles with Gitch and Berger and poses for an army of camera lenses.

10:12—Studies part in the new comic opera written by Berger, which will be produced after the big fight.

12 noon—Eats two whole cows for lunch.

1 P. M.—Allows a neighboring butcher to give him a shave in order to get his face accustomed to severe punishment. Spends the next hour with his surgeon.

3 P. M.—Takes lesson on the kettle drum. Jeff is very fond of music.

4 P. M.—Moves the piano and all the rest of the furniture out of the house and back again.

4:30 P. M.—Fires the cook.

5 P. M.—Gets measured for a set of false teeth, but is prepared in case he should lose his regular ones in the big fight. More road work till dinner.

6:30 P. M.—Orders a banquet consisting of twenty elaborate dinners, and eats them all himself.

8 P. M.—Calls on old school chum and pays back a dime he borrowed twenty-seven years ago.

8:30 P. M.—Gives theatrical entertainment for the benefit of the Society for the Prevention of Clams in Clam Chowder. Does three hours' gym work.

12:30 A. M.—Retires. Good-night!
